INVESTMENT COMMENTARY

In the past month, global equity markets have steadily risen in local currency terms, albeit with a gradual increase in volatility. Political risks and concerns over rising indebtedness in several countries have continued to drive long-term bond yields higher.

The fund experienced some underperformance compared to the underlying equity markets. However, it was bolstered by our holdings in gold and silver mining, particularly due to the strong performance of our position in Aya Gold and Silver. Gold prices have reached new highs, and silver is approaching its record price level from 2011. Additionally, we observed robust performance from automotive parts producers Brembo and Adient, as the market is now better able to account for tariff dynamics.

French homebuilder Nexity lost all its gains following a strong earnings report due to renewed political turbulence in the country.

In line with our disciplined, price-driven investment process, we exited our holding in Japanese regional bank Hyakugo Bank as the position reached our price target. We have also initiated a new position in the severely discounted and overlooked South Korean construction material conglomerate KCC.

Global small and mid-cap stocks continue to trade at a record discount to large/mega cap stocks, which presents a solid investment opportunity over the next 2-3 years, especially within discounted small-caps stock outside the still overly expensive US equity market.
