

Performance Commentary

Global equities and bond yields moved lower in May as intensified trade war rhetoric and new tariffs jolted the market. Oil tumbled and is down nearly 20% since the peak in April. Note that SKAGEN Global currently has no direct oil exposure in the portfolio.

SKAGEN Global outperformed the index in May and the fund ended the month ahead of its benchmark measured both year-to-date and on 12 months. The fund's top-three absolute performers were Tyson Foods, Deutsche Wohnen and Marsh & McLennan. The fund's bottom-three absolute performers were UPM, Beazley and JP Morgan. Broadly speaking, this short-term performance reflects the underlying cyclicality of the companies.

We exited the Dutch insurance company NN Group as our original investment thesis has played out largely as envisioned, with the stock having delivered solid outperformance over our nearly five-year holding period. We also stepped away from the French IT services provider Capgemini as we believe further upside is limited after the stock's ascent in 2019 and we see better long-term opportunities in other holdings.
