

Performance Commentary

During the month we witnessed risk-off moves across asset classes as the coronavirus spread globally. US Treasury yields hit new lows and the VIX index new highs. Cyclical continued to underperform, and within cyclicals, energy was particularly weak. Shell reported disappointing full year results, and given the more uncertain outlook, share buybacks will be lower than previously expected. The auto sector was also sold down, and Mahindra was impacted due to supply disruption of certain components due to the coronavirus in China. Atlantic Sapphire had an incident in their R&D facilities where fish in one of their tanks in Denmark died due to high nitrogen sulfide levels. This has impacted sentiment but does not alter the long-term case. Operations at Golar LNG might be turning a corner with longer term projects coming online, the cyclical shipping business becoming a smaller part of the company and strong growth opportunities coming from their Power business in Brazil. Our electric vehicle battery producers, Samsung SDI and LG Chem, also got wind in their sails on the back of greater confidence in the medium-term growth and profitability opportunities. The portfolio consists of 43 attractively valued companies trading at less than 9x 2020 P/E and 0.9x current P/B versus the MSCI EM index at more than 12x and 1.5x.

The fund selects low-priced, high-quality companies, mainly in emerging economies.

The objective is to provide the best possible risk adjusted return.

The fund is suitable for those with at least a five year investment horizon.
