Portfolio managers' comment

November was a "wait and see" month. After the downturn in September and recovery in October, the credit market was stable but flat in November. Both the up and downturn in September and October were liquidity driven. In other words, international investors took money out of and put money back into the credit market regardless of the fact that fundamentally very little happened. In November there was uncertainty about whether the worst of the storm was over and we could once again begin to focus on what was happening in individual companies. It is the companies that we are most interested in and invested in, but when there is market turbulence, we have to take into consideration anything that effects returns.

On the positive side, our Canadian plane and train manufacturer Bombardier now has local authorities and local pension funds as owners. The company has long been under pressure and we hope that this will bring the company onto safer ground. Our Norwegian investments including Color Group (Color Line) and Norwegian Air Shuttle have performed well. These are companies that do better when the oil price falls.

Companies that have faced further headwinds last month include our Hong Kong based commodity business Noble Group and the Mexican construction company Empresas ICA. Both have faced earnings pressures, Noble as a result of the fall in commodity prices and ICA due to a cut in governmental infrastructure investments in Mexico which is in turn associated with the government's oil sales revenue. For Empresas ICA the situation is serious as they do not currently have sufficient cash to service their debts.

The credit spread in the fund – that is the risk premium – is stable at around 500 basis points (5%) above the risk free rate, as it was last month. By way of comparison, this figure was 375 basis points at the start of the year and 250 at fund inception. An increase in the risk premium results in a drop in return, but at the same time higher expected returns.
