

Performance Commentary

SKAGEN m2 increased its relative lead in November and preserved its solid absolute return year to date. The best contributor was the German company Dic Asset, driven by a positive trend in the German commercial sector. Shangri-La and Far East Consortium were also positive contributors. The Hong Kong listed names benefited from the rebounding hotel market in South East Asia, driven by an increasing number of Chinese travellers. The largest detractors were both Swedish, facing headwinds from potential tax reform and mis-perceived spillover effects from the elevated housing market.

A new holding is the Norwegian Self Storage Group, present in Scandinavia where there is untapped potential for this segment. The market is lagging in terms of storage space per capita and user behaviour. The segment is driven by life changing events, but also the trend towards smaller living space and urbanisation.

The reporting season has ended and the majority of reports were in line with or better than expectations. Valuation is very diffuse among sectors and countries; industrial real estate trades at high premiums while shopping malls, Hong Kong and UK names trade at good discounts.
